Anti-Capitalism Protests at Wall Street and in Major U.S. Cities

Summary

In July 2011, Canadian activist group Adbusters encouraged viewers of their website to protest against corporate influence and address those responsible for the global banking industry crisis. Adbusters stated, "Beginning from one simple demand – a presidential commission to separate money from politics – we start setting the agenda for a new America." The message was bolstered by the support of internet hacking group Anonymous, who demanded their followers "flood lower Manhattan and occupy Wall Street."

The protestors identified themselves as the "99ers" or "99" and believe 99 percent of Americans share the same amount of wealth as the top one percent. Although many other interests are represented at the sites, the Occupy Movement intends to address the perceived disparity in the nation's wealth through nonviolent protest. Some of the protestors donned Guy Fawkes mask (see Figure 1), in homage to "V is for Vendetta," a movie about political protest against a totalitarian regime. The movie referenced Fawkes, the English political figure involved in a failed assassination plot targeting the King of England in 1605.

The movement has been supported by demonstrators in many other major U.S. cities including Washington, DC. The National Park Service has provided extensions to the permits to protest at Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square in Washington, DC through January 2012.

On December 28, 2011, the National Park Service granted a new permit to members of the Occupy Movement to stay at Freedom Plaza through February 28, 2012. However, the protestors will have to share the space with the National Center for Public Policy Research, a free-market think tank planning pro-capitalist activities to counter the Occupy Movement message in February.

On January 27, 2012, the National Park Service notified protestors they will not be allowed to camp or use temporary structures at either Freedom Plaza or McPherson Square and must vacate the premises before January 30. The flyer, approved after a Congressional meeting on Tuesday, stated, "Although 24/7 demonstration vigils and the use of symbolic temporary structures, including empty tents used as symbols of the demonstration, may be permitted in the park areas, camping and the use of temporary structures for camping is not." Occupy Movement protestors told the media they would not leave quietly.

On January 30, 2012, the National Park Service announced they were pushing back the deadline to cease camping at Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

On February 4, 2012, the National Park Service authorized the U.S. Park Police to commence enforcement of camping restrictions at Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

Participants

Adbusters is an anti-consumerist and pro-environmental activist group based in Canada. According to their website, they work with a "global network of artists, activists, writers, pranksters, students, educators and entrepreneurs who want to advance the new social activist movement of the information age." Adbusters publishes essays by people such as Bill McKibben, who was arrested by U.S. Park Police in September 2011 for civil disobedience at the White House. Their magazine, titled "Adbusters," has a self-reported circulation of 120,000 and is devoted to challenging consumerism.

In Washington, DC, members of Code Pink protested with demonstrators at Freedom Plaza. The anti-war group added their website and resources to further the Occupy Movement. Code Pink is of record with the USSS and has attempted to infiltrate protected sites and the U.S. Capitol buildings to receive media attention for their anti-war message.

The Occupy Movement in Washington, DC was divided between demonstrators for Occupy DC in McPherson Square and the group in Freedom Plaza under the name "Stop the Machine," which added anti-war and environmental justice demands to the Occupy message. Although both groups attempted to unite under the Occupy Movement, efforts have stagnated due to in-fighting on both sides.

Various labor unions, particularly those in New York City and Washington, DC, pledged support for the Occupy Movement. In New York, members of the Transport Workers Union and the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) 1199 – healthcare workers – pledged support while members of the Communication Workers of America and unemployed office building workers from SEIU protested at an Occupy rally in Washington, DC.

The Occupy Movement, especially in New York, received heavy endorsement from entertainment celebrities. Prominent musicians and actors were visible at the rally, provided resources to the protestors, and voiced support for the movement, which proposed the wealthiest tax payers in America are not paying their fair share.

One of the Occupy Movement websites is linked to the blog of political activist Kevin Zeese, a former aide to Ralph Nader, who refuted claims the Occupy Movement is connected to the Democratic Party. Zeese and others have stated politicians and some activist leaders have attempted to co-opt the Occupy Movement message but the protests are not connected.

Other camps across the country were disbanded by city officials; however, the two groups in Washington, DC continue to occupy public space. The group at Freedom Plaza, formerly known as Stop the Machine, changed its name to Occupy Washington, DC. This group is very similar, but not the same as Occupy DC, which occupies McPherson Square.

Following the closure of several Occupy Movement camps, most notably at Zuccotti Park in New York City, more protestors bolstered the ranks at the two locations in Washington, DC.

Timeline

On September 17, 2011, 1,000 people demonstrated during the 66th United Nations General Assembly and in conjunction with the U.S. Day of Rage, a gathering inspired by the Arab Spring to protest the corrupt democratic process in the U.S. Seven people were arrested by the New York City Police Department (NYPD) during their march through the streets of lower Manhattan. Protestors gathered at Zuccotti Park, a privately-owned public area near Wall Street, as a base of operations.

On September 22, 2011, demonstrators connected with a labor union for the first time. They interrupted a Sotheby's Auction in a show of solidarity with the art handler's union that had been locked out. Many other labor unions linked up with protestors.

On September 24, 2011, 80 people were arrested for attempting to force street closures, blocking traffic, and disorderly conduct. Videos of police officer tactics to control the protestors were posted to various internet sites and subjected to scrutiny. Anonymous posted the personal contact information of an officer who pepper sprayed a woman who was offering no visible resistance. The group encouraged followers to contact NYPD and complain about the officer's actions.

On September 30, 2011, 1,000 protestors gathered in Boston in support of the movement.

On October 1, 2011, 700 protestors were arrested when they tried to cross New York's Brooklyn Bridge.

On October 5, 2011, an unspecified number of labor union members gathered to support the movement in both Boston and New York City. Students and large numbers of unaffiliated unemployed joined the protest, resulting in an estimated 15,000 people. At this time, protests started at a number of college campuses across the country.

On October 6, 2011, unspecified numbers of protestors organized at Freedom Plaza in Washington DC under "Stop the Machine." Protestors stated they would occupy the area until the government created a serious jobs program, added an amendment to the Constitution to take "big money" out of elections by repealing the Citizens United Supreme Court decision, and investigated Wall Street bankers that were involved in the financial crisis.

On October 8, 2011, protestors demonstrated at the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum in Washington, DC. They were there to protest an exhibit of military unmanned aerial vehicles and drones. The museum temporarily shut down after protestors clashed with security.

On October 9, 2011, 100 members of Occupy DC protested outside the White House. One individual was arrested by USSS/UD for throwing a shoe at an officer.

On October 11, 2011, six protestors were arrested by U.S. Capitol Police for disorderly conduct when they ran into the Hart Building and unfurled protest banners.

On the same day, Boston Police Officers arrested approximately 141 protestors after they refused to vacate a park area located in Boston, MA.

On October 12, 2011, 30 members of Occupy Grand Rapids protested during Vice President Biden's visit to Grand Rapids, Michigan.

On the same day, 11 protestors in San Francisco, California were arrested after blocking the entrance to a Wells Fargo headquarters for five hours.

Groups in many U.S. cities have demonstrated in support of the Occupy Movement.

On October 15, 2011, protestors start a “Global Day of Action” with demonstrations planned in over 80 countries. Riots break out in Rome, Italy and demonstrators clashed violently with police officers. Other protestors in London, England, attempted to occupy the London Stock Exchange.

Thousands more arrived in New York. Several protestors were removed from a Citibank branch at Washington Square Park in New York resulting in the arrests of 20 people.

On the same day, 3,000 people demonstrated in Denver, Colorado. Protestors held up signs calling for the abolition of the Federal Reserve. Twenty three people were arrested when they refused to vacate the state-owned park that served as a meeting ground for the protestors.

Law enforcement made arrest at several more Occupy Movement sites. In Chicago, Illinois, 175 people were arrested and 100 more throughout Arizona.

On October 25, 2011, law enforcement moved to clear the Occupy Oakland site due to escalating concern about sanitation, violence, and crime. Police arrested 102 protestors. One protestor, a former Marine and Iraq War veteran, sustained injuries when he was allegedly hit on the head with a gas canister by police. This incident prompted an apology from local politicians and created a heated national debate about the demonstrations.

On November 2, 2011, an estimated group of 3,000 protestors gathered at the Port of Oakland. The protest was peaceful but the port was closed to operations, due to the congestion around the work area. Open source reporting indicated as many as 30,000 protestors created disturbances in Oakland and San Francisco in an attempt to shut down banks and other businesses.

On November 5, 2011, protestors in Portland, Oregon, started the “Move your $” campaign, where organizers asked participants to remove their assets from several top tier banks and reinvest with local institutions. Around the world, protestors galvanized their presence at Occupy Movement sites and commemorated Guy Fawkes Day - an English holiday, also known as Bonfire Night, celebrating the failure of Guy Fawkes to assassinate the King of England in 1605.

On November 10, 2011, a 35-year old man died at the Occupy Movement site in Burlington, Vermont. Preliminary police investigation indicated the death was a suicide and the man shot himself in his tent. On the same day, a man was shot and killed following a dispute at the Occupy Oakland site, prompting further concerns for safety at Occupy Movement sites around the country.

On November 15, 2011, New York law enforcement served notices to protestors at Zuccotti Park to vacate the area due to health and safety concerns. They were requested to take down their tents and make-shift shelters, adhere to curfews, and relocate to allow the park to be cleaned. Protestors were told they could return to the park after the cleaning without tents or encampment provisions. Many of them left and relocated down the street to Foley Park, intending to return to Zuccotti Park. Around 200 people were arrested.

In response to the raid on Zuccotti Park, the Occupy Wall Street protestors staged a large-scale demonstration in lower Manhattan on Thursday, November 17, with the stated intent of shutting down Wall Street. Threats of violent behavior in retaliation for the raid, some of it directed at law enforcement, spread through the media and viral internet videos. One man was arrested for terrorist statements, stating they would burn down New York City. Demonstrations took place in other cities, including Washington, DC, to show solidarity with the New York protestors.

In Berkeley, California, at the University of California at Davis, several people linked arms at the campus and refused police orders to move and vacate. Protestors were pepper sprayed by police and the video prompted school officials to publically condemn the police action. Following media scrutiny and national debate, the officers responsible for the action were placed on administrative leave. Police officials stated they would investigate the incident.

In December 2011, several Occupy Movement sites were pressured by authorities to disperse or cooperate with more restrictive requirements regarding safety and sanitation concerns.

On December 4, 2011, U.S. Park Police officers arrested 31 protestors in McPherson Square, Washington, DC, for refusing to dismantle a plywood structure they erected just after midnight. Officers removed the protestors and tore down the plywood structure amid public safety concerns by city officials.

On December 7, 2011, around 70 protestors marched to K Street, in protest of the many Washington, DC lobbyist firms in the area, leading to a temporary road closure due to congestion. The Washington Metropolitan Police (MPD) arrested 62 protestors, including one person for misdemeanor assault on a police officer. This was the largest number of arrests since the Occupy DC group secured McPherson Square as their home base in September. The same day, 12 protestors were arrested at the Supreme Court and 11 others, affiliated with American Dream Movement, were arrested for obstructing a public highway.

In December 2011, open source media reported on November 30, two members of Occupy Tampa posed as a couple and wore evening attire to gain entry to a 2012 U.S. presidential candidate Mitt Romney fundraiser at the Tampa Museum of Art. Upon gaining entry, the couple shouted, "Shame, Shame!!" until security forced them to leave. One of the protestors initially resisted and yelled, "Look at this crowd! Multiply it by 3,000. Welcome to the (2012) RNC." Neither was arrested and the protests continued outside the venue.

On December 18, 2011, U.S. Park Police officers arrested two protestors after they unsuccessfully attempted to chain themselves to a fence at the White House.

On December 20, 2011, U.S. Park Police officers arrested seven protestors for failure to obey an order following a demonstration with 50 individuals at the White House.

On December 28, 2011, ten protestors were arrested in Des Moines, Iowa outside Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney's campaign office. The protestors demanded Romney and Wells Fargo Bank release their tax returns and return campaign contributions.

On December 30, 2011, U.S. Park Police officers arrested two protestors for wearing masks during a demonstration with nine individuals at the White House.

In late-December 2011, Zuccotti Park was cleared by New York City officials for cleaning. Protestors were allowed back without tents, sleeping bags, and other amenities to stay overnight. Following this mandate, very few protestors attempted to create a presence in the park.

On January 4, 2012, media reports indicated many of the tents erected at Freedom Plaza were left vacant by protestors over the holidays. Some of the remaining protestors told the media cold temperatures and class division led to the decreasing numbers at the site.

Other media reports stated Occupy DC at McPherson Square faces safety and health concerns, not only from the cold temperatures but from numerous sightings of rats. These concerns could force city officials to urge closing of the camp.

On January 5, 2012, Occupy Washington, DC announced to the media they were expanding their efforts in the winter towards a massive "American Spring." This is a reference to the Arab Spring of 2010, in which civil resistance and social networking media were used to topple governments in the Middle East and North Africa. They stated two houses, one in Washington, DC, and one in Maryland, were designated for special projects including the production of an unspecified television show. Protestors mentioned "National Occupation of Washington, DC," scheduled to begin on March 30, 2012, as a combination of music, education, and resistance mobilizing people from across the nation.

On January 17, 2012, approximately 1,500 protestors marched from the U.S. Supreme Court to the White House. Two individuals attempted to jump the fence line before falling back to the ground. Video footage of protestors showed an unknown individual throw a smoke device over the fence. Responders cleared the device and declared the area safe. Two packages were also left unattended and declared safe by responders.

On January 24, 2012, 80 protestors demonstrated near the White House during President Obama's 2012 State of the Union Address.

On January 28, 2012, Occupy Oakland staged a large "move in day" protest. The protestors attempted to "occupy" the vacant Henry J. Kaiser Convention Center and the Oakland Museum of California, but were ordered to disperse and several arrests were made at each site. Later that evening, large crowds gathered outside an Oakland YMCA, where clashes with the Oakland Police Department escalated and officers were pelted with bottles, metal pipes, rocks, spray cans, and burning flares. Officers responded with tear gas and began arresting demonstrators. Around the same time as the YMCA protest, Occupy Oakland demonstrators broke into Oakland City Hall and smashed display cases, graffitied walls, cut electrical wires, and burned an American flag. By the end of the day, approximately 400 protestors were arrested. Occupy Oakland organizers condemned police actions and claim to be organizing a "day of action" against the arrests on February 6, 2012.

As a result of these events, approximately 300 demonstrators in New York City marched in support of Occupy Oakland.

On the same day, hundreds of Occupy DC protestors gathered outside the annual Alfalfa Club dinner in Washington, DC, to demonstrate against the perceived injustices of DC's "power brokers." The protestors heckled guests and threw glitter on Senator Joe Lieberman as he arrived for the dinner.

On January 29, 2012, U.S. Park Police officers were handing out fliers about the January 30th deadline to cease overnight camping in McPherson Square when a male protestor became angry and confronted the officers. One Park Police officer used a Taser to subdue the individual after he would not comply with police orders. The individual was arrested and charged with disturbing the peace after he was taken to George Washington Hospital.

On February 4, 2012, U.S. Park Police commenced enforcement of overnight camping restrictions at McPherson Square and Freedom Plaza. Park Police seized any camp equipment found on the site and removed the tents in which the equipment was found.

Inspections were suspended later that day and approximately 25 officers were scheduled to remain overnight and monitor and enforce regulations. U.S. Park Police arrested 11 individuals for failure to obey a lawful order, crossing a police line, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer, simple assault, and felony assault on a police officer. One Park Police officer was struck in the head with a brick by a protestor and sustained non-life threatening injuries during the operation.

On February 5, 2012, the U.S. Park Police commenced enforcement of camping restrictions at Freedom Plaza. One individual was arrested for threatening a police officer. Park Police scheduled 18 officers to remain overnight to monitor and enforce regulations. No further incidents were reported.

Upon completion of the enforcement action, protestors were allowed to return to McPherson Square and Freedom Plaza.

On February 14, 2012, the FBI advised an Occupy Movement-affiliated event, Shut Down the Corporations, was scheduled to occur nationwide on February 29, 2012. The group's website called for non-violent, direct action against members of the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) to "reclaim our ability to make the decisions that affect our lives." The group claimed corporations and the government suppressed and silenced their collective voices emphasizing foreclosure, unemployment, lack of health care, and environment destruction. The website lists ALEC member businesses and cities and recommended tactics such as blockades, boycotts, sit-ins, and other types of protest.

The website specifically mentions the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA) headquarters located in downtown Washington, DC as a target for direct action.

In March 2012, Occupy Movement websites and open source media reported group members and affiliates intended to protest major events throughout the year. They specifically mentioned G8/NATO Summits, the Republican National Convention, and the Democratic National Convention. Occupy Movement leaders instructed members to use certain keywords to link their social networking communications.

On March 16, 2012, demonstrators posted on their website that Occupy Department of Education (DOE) was planned as part of the National Occupation of Washington, DC (NOW DC) event scheduled from March 30, 2012 to April 30, 2012. Organizers described the event as a protest against poor public education testing procedures and the quality of national education. Other events listed included social forums and art/music festivals. They stated the event would include marches and non-violent direct action.

Conclusion

Demonstrators have protested in nearly every state in America. Open source reporting estimated the largest protests in the U.S. were in Boston (10,000 participants); Washington, DC (3,000); Chicago (8,000); New York City (15,000); Seattle (5,000); and Burlington, Vermont (1,000). Local and national politicians have been pressured by some in the media to act for or against the movement; however, most have avoided making a decisive move against the protestors. The potential shutdown of Occupy DC may be the most difficult. The National Park Service has provided extensions to the permits to protest at Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square through February 2012. Additionally, as many as six DC city council members have stated they believe the protestors should be allowed to stay. If the remaining Occupy protests are shut-down, they may travel and dramatically increase the demonstrations in Washington, DC. Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square could quickly become the epicenter of the Occupy Movement.

As our protectees continue to speak about the economy, wars in Iran and Afghanistan, and healthcare, demonstrators are likely to feel they have a global stage to protest in furtherance of their message. The primary themes of the Occupy Movement are likely to continue through the 2012 U.S. presidential campaign and associated demonstrations may occur at protected sites.

Members of the Occupy Movement claimed they would have a strong presence during the Iowan Republican caucuses on January 3, 2012. Some political pundits speculated the Occupy Movement could generate similar political impact to the Tea Party in 2010. However, media reports indicated the Occupy Movement protestors had little impact and did not go further than heckling the candidates. Occupy Movement members pledged to stage protests in New Hampshire and South Carolina during the presidential nomination process.

Based on the Occupy Washington DC announcement to the media on January 5, 2012, protestors are committed to maintaining a presence in Washington DC for 2012. The Occupy Movement groups in Washington, DC continue to receive donations, private contributions, and assistance from local Washington DC health and safety organizations. Zeese, a political activist with the group, said 2012 is the international year of the co-op, and they would focus on "creating worker-owned co-operatives to provide income to occupiers and funding for the movement." Protestors continue to use social networking media to ask for help and affirm their position to stay at the camps.

On January 26, 2012, Adbusters emailed over 90,000 subscribers to their website and magazine with a message targeting the G8 and NATO summits scheduled for May 2012. The message called for people from all over the world to converge on Chicago and advertise their exploits via the twitter "#OCCUPYCHICAGO."

Occupy Movement demonstrators, specifically Students for a Democratic Society, are planning action at high-profile events, such as G8/NATO in Chicago, Illinois and the Republican and Democratic National Conventions. Such information has been disseminated through law enforcement entities.

CASE SUMMARY

On 01/17/12, 1500 members of Occupy DC (673-86877) protested at the WH North Fence Line (NFL). During the demonstration, two individuals attempted to climb the WH fence and moments later an unknown subject threw a smoke bomb (672-23191) over the NFL. The (b)(7)e " and the area was immediately cleared. DCFD responded, declared the smoke device safe, and three unattended packages were retrieved (one outside and two inside the fence line). The packages revealed a water bottle, gallon water, paper plane, two poster boards, vodka bottle, and a smoke bomb/grenade. The incident gained media attention. The demonstration concluded without any arrests.

On 09/17/11, the NY Police Department reported 200 members of the groups Adbusters, Culture Jammers, and Anonymous gathered at the Wall Street Bull Statue to protest US economic practices and to "Occupy Wall Street." The groups used various internet social media sites to organize this "Day of Rage," comparing their cause to protests in countries such as Egypt and Greece. Several open source media outlets reported between 700-1000 individuals participated in the demonstration. According to NYPD, no arrests occurred. The moved to Zucotti Park in lower Manhattan as part of the protest and the demonstrators planned to remain until their goals were accomplished.

On 09/19/11, 500 people protestors marched near Wall Street to protest capitalism, government corruption, and the influence of U.S. money on U.S. politics. Several people wore masks. The demonstration was on-going.

On 09/20/11, NYPD advised they arrested 7 protestors at Zuccotti Park for disorderly conduct and failure to have a sound amplification permit.

On 9/21/11, 100 members of the group named Anonymous marched out of Zucotti Park, through lower Manhattan, and back to the park. The purpose of the march was to stop the execution of Troy Davis in the state of Georgia. Three people were arrested for disorderly conduct.

On 09/24/11, 90 people associated with the Occupy Wall Street demonstration were arrested by the NYPD. Also, 1500 people associated with Occupy Wall Street continued demonstrating against Wall Street and capitalism. NYPD was forced to shut down traffic.

As of 09/26/11, the demonstration continued in Zucotti Park and the surrounding Wall Street area. No protectee movements were effected.

On 10/26/11, 25 members of the groups American Indian Movement and Occupy Denver demonstrated outside the Metropolitan State Event Center in Denver, CO during President Obama's speech (674-126951) to protest the installation of the Keystone Pipeline. Approximately 7 demonstrators entered the event site while President Obama was on stage. The demonstrators held up a banner against the installation of the pipeline and the effect it would have on the indigenous people. Event staff asked the individuals to leave and they were peacefully escorted out by local police. The demonstration concluded without further incident.

CASE SUMMARY

On 11/22/11, approximately 60 members of Occupy Wall Street peacefully protested at Manchester High School in Manchester, NH during the visit of President Barack Obama (674-127326). Members carried signs that read, "Obama isn't working" and "A vote for Obama is a vote for Goldman Sachs." Open source reported several members inside the hall interrupted the speech and heckled POTUS for several minutes prior to being drowned out by POTUS' supporters. Further, one member of the demonstration handed POTUS a note along the rope line concerning the economy and recent arrests of his fellow Occupiers. No further incidents were reported.

CASE SUMMARY

On 11/30/11, approximately two hundred and fifty (250) members associated with the Occupy Wall Street movement demonstrated in front of a POTUS Barack Obama site during his visit to NYC (674-0127307). The demonstrators gathered at a nearby park and marched to the site. Their purpose was to call attention to "corporate greed" and government spending. It should be noted, the demonstrators used social media to spread word of the demonstration and to "Occupy Obama." Upon departure of POTUS Obama from the site, the demonstrators were caught in the temporary restricted (frozen) zone and complained on the website Twitter they were "trapped" by police and USSS. The demonstration concluded without incident or arrest. There was local media attention and no protectee movements were affected.

CASE SUMMARY

On 05/18/12, USSS/PID reported several hundred members (673-0087099) of Occupy Chicago (673-87040) conducted marches throughout the downtown Chicago area for the 2012 NATO Summit (672-0000087). The group split and marched in different directions. One group was civilly disobedient, and both groups obstructed traffic and were escorted by Chicago Police Depoartment (CPD). The groups had signs and sound amplification equipment. Later during the day, a group of 20 wearing gas masks and wrapping their hands in gauze proceeded on S. Canal St to W. Madison St, while another group of 60 demonstrated at S. Michigan Ave and W. Van Buren St. CPD and USSS monitored the demonstrations. These demonstrations had concluded without further incident.

CASE SUMMARY

On 01/17/12, 1500 members of Occupy DC (673-86877) protested the influence of corporate money in politics along the WH North Fence Line (NFL). During the demonstration, two individuals attempted to climb the WH fence and moments later an unknown subject threw a smoke bomb (672-23191) over the NFL. The (b)(7)e and the area was immediately cleared. DCFD responded, declared the smoke device safe, and three unattended packages were retrieved (one outside and two inside the fence line). The packages revealed a water bottle, gallon water, paper plane, two poster boards, vodka bottle, and a smoke bomb/grenade. The incident gained media attention and the demonstration concluded without any arrests.

CASE SUMMARY

On 01/28/12, approximately 175 members of Occupy DC peacefully protested one block from the Capital Hilton in Washington DC, to protest the Alfalfa Dinner. The demonstrators blocked vehicle traffic in the area and attempted to form a 'human chain' around the site barricades to prevent attendees from entering. The demonstrators were observed throwing water balloons and glitter at the arriving guests. Senator Joseph Lieberman was the victim of the "glitter" incident. The demonstration concluded without arrest or further incidents.
